

Kamen Rider Femme

is a fictional character in the tokusatsu production Kamen Rider Ryuki. She is one of the 13 Kamen Riders that made a brief cameo in the TV Special 13 Riders, and appeared in the movie Episode: Final. Her true identity is Miho Kirishima, and is portrayed by Natsuki Kato.

She is also the first official female Rider in the Kamen Rider Series. Kamen Rider Femme's name is derived from the French word femme, meaning "woman," which is a reference to her being the first official female Kamen Rider.

Fictional character biography

Miho Kirishima's story is told in the movie, Kamen Rider Ryuki: Episode Final, which was considered an alternate ending to the TV series. She is a con-artist that seduces wealthy men in order to steal their money and/or valuables. Miho accepted Kanzaki's proposal to join the Rider war for two reasons. She wanted to resurrect her sister, who was killed by Takeshi Asakura (Kamen Rider Ouja) and also to take revenge on Asakura for his act.

Shinji met Miho while she was running from a man she tried swindling. A brief romantic interest in Shinji was shown as the two interacted and were often seen bickering like an old married couple. Though she often berated him, she would still perform acts of kindness toward him (such as tying his shoelaces). Miho was rather dedicated to winning the war, as in one scene tried to steal Shinji's deck before he caught her and told her off.

Miho eventually succeeds in killing Asakura by destroying his deck when he was in blank form, after Kamen Rider Ryuga destroyed Genocider and saved her. Asakura was reverted to human form and tried to strangle her, only to be eventually consumed by the Mirror World. Miho was glad that she avenged her sister, now with one task fulfilled.

Miho was grateful to Shinji (she mistook Ryuga as him) and treated him to dinner. However, Ryuga later came out of the mirror and tried to harm her, before he revealed himself. Miho was attacked, but she was saved later by Shinji, as Ryuki came in the nick of time. They escaped later, and Shinji walked Miho home, before she died from wounds sustained while being ambushed by Ryuga. Her card deck was left unnoticed.

In the 13 Riders special, Miho as Kamen Rider Femme was only seen at the final battle where she fought Shinji and Ren. She was one of the remaining Riders to activate their Final Vents on Shinji, then as Kamen Rider Survive Knight.

Kamen Rider Femme

Because of her appearance, she is often compared to Kamen Rider Knight as both have similar designs, contract monsters (with opposing color schemes) and that Femme's cape is feathery. With her rapier, she can conjure her Wing Slasher or execute her Final Vent , where Blancwing attacks the enemy from behind by producing a gust with its wings, sending the opponent flying into the path of Femme's Wing Slasher.

Contract Monster

: Modelled after a swan, its name derived from the French word "blanc", meaning "white".
